

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY - SOFTWARE DEVELOPER APPRENTICESHIP

Program Number: 50-152-1

Apprenticeship

Campus: Fond du Lac, West Bend, Online

This program is not eligible for financial aid

About the Program

Software developers develop, create, and modify general computer applications software or specialized utility programs. They analyze user needs and develop software solutions. They also design or customize software for client use to optimize operational efficiency. Software developers may analyze and design databases within an application area, working individually or coordinating database development as part of a team.

What You'll Learn

Students in the Information Technology - Software Developer Apprentice program gain hands-on practice using common programming languages, including Java and SQL. A focus is placed on technical documentation and software design. Students are introduced to the Systems Development Life Cycle, database concepts, and Structure Query Language (SQL).
